Trash Brats

The Verdict

This Trash Brat is a star in the local punk scene, with no sign of fading.

The Man Behind the Mini

As front man for the glam punk Trash Brats since 1987, O'Blivion could be called a veteran punk diva of sorts. A vision somewhere between Robin Zander, Michael Monroe and Britney Spears, he has faithfully fronted the Brats with the pep of a cheerleader at a homecoming game and meshed it with the raw and dirty side of Detroit rock attitude that is a Brats show.

No Girly Man

Despite fishnets and glittery platform shoes, he's not above shows of machismo—O'Blivion punched out a drunk guy who tried to cop a feel on stage during a club tour.

Alter Ego

Brian McCarty, who looks and sounds like O'Blivion, sans miniskirt. He's been seen playing guitar for the garage punk trio, Queen Bee, and has released his own solo CD, "Falls From Grace," which, with its vaudeville feel, is a far cry from Trash Brats. —Lisa Martino

Tip Sheet
One of Detroit's Best
 Nominated for best local singer because it's not easy for a guy to wear stiletto heels and still rock.
